

Connie Jo Erickson

To survive in our ecosystem, we humans must treat it as the delicate thing that it is. For us to truly thrive, so must other living things, with our help and consideration. As we plant, water, build up the soil, we are part of their existence, growing, consuming and becoming one with them. In my pieces, human figures intertwine with vines as they become one thread of life.

