

Wendy Van de Kamp

I have been inspired by my sister's love of butterflies. She has volunteered in the butterfly garden in Orida, FL for 18 years. Thus, she's established her own butterfly garden around her home, in order to feed the various species that migrate through Florida from all over the United States. The Monarch Is endangered due to the fires in California, as well as the pesticides used in South Dekota and other Midwest states. In Florida their numbers are increasing because of the efforts of people like my sister planting milkweed for them.
